

Introducing the model LM4

EXPERIMENTAL LIFE ENERGY METER

Now portable and battery operated
Built in "blue square" electrode
Excellent repeatability

Some of the most popular uses include:

- Test the variability of the Human body Life Energy Field
- Compare fluid samples for energy absorption
- Test energy generators and devices
- Compare the Chi energy of the chakras
- Perform experimental work in the field of Orgonomy
- Examine the effects of water memory and charging

The Experimental Life Energy Meter

In 1947, Wilhelm Reich MD published The Cancer Biopathy, detailing his research in visualizing and applying "Orgone Energy". In this work, he described a device which he called the "Orgone Field Meter" which responded to living things as they were brought close to the device. The Experimental Life Energy Meter, developed in Canada, is based on the same principle as Reich's device and has been made into a small hand-held or bench-top unit.

The meter is provided with a built-in small flat plate electrode located under the blue square above the meter. This internal electrode may be used for measuring liquid containers and small objects by conveniently placing the test object on the center of the blue square. Humans, animals and plants may also be measured by bringing them in contact with the blue square. Alternatively, a tube electrode included in the package may also be used.
